

Glass Ornament Tutorial

by Suzanna Lee

Materials;

Glass or Clear Plastic Christmas Ornaments
1 sheet of Transparency Film
1 cut file per ornament you are making (Swimming Strokes Girl Digital Cut File by 17 Turtles)
Silhouette or other digital cutting machine
Core'dinations Sticky Backed Glitter Sheets
Snow (Stampendous Mica Fragments)
Sequins (American Crafts)

Directions;

1. Using your Silhouette cut your transparency film to be slightly smaller than the size of your ornament. My ornament is 3.5 inches wide so I cut my circle to be 3.25 inches wide.

I resized this file from Lori Whitlock available HERE.

2. Again using your Silhouette (or other electronic cutting machine) cut the image that you want from Core'dinations Sticky Backed Glitter Sheets. I used Juliana Michaels' backstroke swimmer and sized it the width of my transparency.

3. Peel back the backing of the Sticky Backed Glitter Sheet to reveal the sticky surface and adhere this to the center of your transparency sheet. Use a bone folder to burnish the back and ensure tight stick. Trim the overlapping edges with scissors.

4. Roll up your transparency as such:

5. Insert the tight roll into the opening of the ornament. It's kind of like putting a message in a bottle! Once inside, it will pop open and if necessary, use tweezers to center and position the insert where you want it.

6. Looks great, right? But you want a little more pizzazz so here comes the messy part. Using a funnel, add some snow. I used Stampendous mica fragments but you can buy cheaper snow this time of year at the craft store. I wanted a little extra "umpf" so I added some snowflake and star sequins both in front of and behind the transparency.

7. Snip off the top of the transparency so that you can insert the little silver (or gold) topper back on the ornament. Tie a pretty bow and if you have one of those nifty Imaginisce ribbon cutters, use it to seal off a nice "v" to the ends of your ribbon!
